Background

6. Turkey is a party to several international human rights treaties, including:
a) Convention Against Torture and Other Cruel Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment.
b) Optional Protocol to the Convention Against Torture and Cruel Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (Signature only).
c) International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.
d) Optional Protocol to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.
f) Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women.
g) International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination.
i) International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families
k) Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (signature only).

7. Politically Turkey is a republic and ideologically is secular. The Constitution states the country to be a democracy, and members of parliament may not ratify laws that contradict the contents of the Constitution. Despite Turkey’s efforts in resolving its human rights issues for setting the stage to join the EU, human rights violations continue to take place in the country.

Freedom of expression

8. Human rights defenders, writers, journalists and other members of the opposition are illegally pursued and arbitrarily detained, and because of their beliefs they are faced with threats and violence by the police and other groups. Article 301 of Turkey’s Criminal Code which was amended by the parliament imposes illegal restrictions on freedom of expression. Other Turkish laws for their part restrict freedom of expression. By issuing unjust verdicts, the courts in the country play a very important role in this restriction.

Torture and other inhuman treatment or behaviour
9. Reports from detention centres, police cells and illegal prisons all indicate that acts of torture and inhuman treatments are committed. People that are accused of political crimes and or ordinary crimes are tortured. The European Court of Human Rights has voted in favour of several cases that have been referred to it, and forced the torturers to compensate.

Recommendations

10. As a human rights NGO, the ODVV recommends the Turkish government to observe the following:

a) Despite the relative freedom of the press and the media, Turkey must observe Article 19 of the UDHR and Article 19(2) of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, as part of its commitments, and remove laws that contradict these articles and to realise and guarantee the right to freedom of expression.

b) The Turkish government must consider the presumption of innocence before proven guilty. And no matter what the circumstances all governments must refrain from committing acts of torture.

c) The Turkish government must be committed to Article 5 of the UDHR and Article 18 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.

d) By ratifying the Convention Against Torture and the sending of a report to the Committee against Torture the Turkish government is obliged and must fully monitor the performance of the police and the conditions in prisons and detention centres. The Turkish parliament must also swiftly ratify the optional protocol on the Convention Against Torture.
