SWEDEN
- In its latest consideration in 2002 of Andorra, the Committee on the Rights of the Child (CRC) noted concern at whether the principles of non-discrimination (art. 2 of the Convention on the Rights of the Child), the best interests of the child (art. 3), the right to life, survival and development of the child (art. 6) and respect for the views of the child (art. 12) are fully reflected in Andorra’s legislation and administrative and judicial decisions, as well as in policies and programmes relevant to children at both national and local levels. The CRC also encouraged Andorra to continue and complete its review of legislation relevant to children to ensure full compliance with the Convention. Furthermore, corporal punishment remains lawful in the home in Andorra, a practice which the CRC has concluded contradicts the Convention on the Rights of Child.

Could the Government of Andorra elaborate on measures it is taking to fully implement the Convention on the Rights of the Child, including what measures the government is taking to ensure the freedom of children from physical or mental violence, injury or abuse, neglect or negligent treatment, maltreatment or exploitation in accordance with the Convention?

- Sweden welcomes Andorra’s ratification in 2006 of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination. In its national report to the UPR, Andorra outlined measures in place with regard to non-citizens, including with regard to ensuring school attendance by children of foreign residents. At the same time, civil society and other human rights organisations have noted areas of concern with regard to undue discrimination of non-citizens in other areas, such as in the denial of the right to vote in local elections by foreign residents.

Could the government of Andorra elaborate on additional measures, beyond what is mentioned in its national UPR report, with regard to ensuring the enjoyment of human rights by non-citizens, such as on any plans to allow foreign residents to vote in local elections?
